

PROP 30 IS WORKING FOR CALIFORNIA

The last recession caused more than $56 billion in cuts to education, and critical services like health care. Voters thankfully passed Prop 30 in 2012, which (so far) has generated over $24 billion for CA. We've hired teachers, brought additional books and supplies into classrooms, and improved community colleges. It also helped prevent more devastating cuts to services for seniors and low-income children, including health care programs.

THE NEED TO CONTINUE BUDGET STABILITY

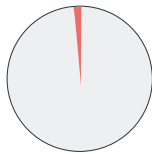

It is clear from the Governor's 2016 budget proposal and the inevitability of a future economic downturn that additional revenues are needed to avoid deficits and massive budget cuts. Without a temporary extension of Prop 30, our state will face a nearly $3 billion structural deficit and a $5 billion shortfall for public education in the first year alone.
